

The United Way of Greater Atlanta's InForum Partnership Engagement Series is convening nonprofit, philanthropic and public partners to learn together as we seek to improve Child Well-Being in our 13-county region.

THE ISSUE

Partners gather together at each InForum with some important facts top of mind: of the nearly 1.3 million children living in the Atlanta 13-county region, close to half a million live in communities with low or very low child well-being. United Way is looking to change that by improving the lives of more than 250,000 children across Greater Atlanta by 2027. This isn't just United Way. This is all of us, non-profit leaders and community champions alike, coming together to change our community.

UNITED WAY'S ROLE

It's only through partnerships and a unified community that we're going to move the needle for our children through the Child Well-Being Movement. That's where InForum comes in. United Way of Greater Atlanta introduced the Partnership Breakfast Series in 2017. The series takes place the 3rd Thursday of the month, January through May.

THE RESULTS

Each event pairs a national expert with a local influencer, creating a dialogue that blends best practices from across the country with local insight and experience. Collectively, attendees leave better equipped to keep fighting the good fight and having forged new connections to leverage experience, learnings and insights.
