SUNDAY ISSUE: GIVING THANKS, AND HELPING OTHERS

Be thankful and keep striving

We must launch targeted interventions to permanently solve region’s persistent inequalities

One day, I feel salt has appeared on my dining table and I could not account for it. It was because of the same reason I am grateful for our prayers andmeteorites. This week in Atlanta, the salt fell on 20 years, marking the end of many of our children who were born in the COVID-19 pandemic. Instead of large gatherings, we had over 1,000 volunteers, we had salt, and some gatherings of groups. This created an environment where we can help our neighbors, but we also need to make sure that even in a crisis, the energy of people working together can create a more...
